

Data protection information

1. Preliminary remarks

Rothschild & Co Global Advisory Switzerland AG, Zollikerstrasse 181, 8034 Zurich ("Rothschild & Co") has issued the below privacy statement (the "Privacy Statement") in the light of the upcoming revision of the Swiss Federal Act on Data Protection (the "revFADP").

With the following information, Rothschild & Co would like to give an overview of how personal data will be processed and of the data subject's rights according to data privacy laws. The details on what data will be processed and which method will be used depend significantly on the services applied for or agreed upon. Hence, not every element of this information may be applicable to all clients and data subjects (the "Client", e.g. authorized representative, authorized signatory, holder of a power of attorney, director, beneficial owner, potential new client / prospect).

2. Who is responsible for data processing and who can the Client contact?

The Client can reach Rothschild & Co's responsible department and representative(s) for data protection matters at:

3. Which sources and which data do we use?

Rothschild & Co processes personal data that it obtains from the Clients in the context of the business relationship. Rothschild & Co also processes – insofar as necessary to render its service – personal data that it obtains from publicly accessible sources (e.g. debt registers, land registers, commercial and association registers, press, internet) or that is legitimately transmitted to it by other companies in the Rothschild & Co Group or from other third parties (e.g. a credit agency).

Rothschild & Co may collect various types of personal data about the Clients, depending on the particular services it provides, including, but not limited to:

- identification data of the Client or its corporate bodies (e.g., name, ID card, passport details and other national ID numbers, date and place of birth, nationality, IP address);
- contact details (e.g., address and email address, phone number);
- authentication data (e.g., specimen signature);
- background checks;
- tax situation;
- marketing and sales data (including advertising scores);
- data from the interactions between Rothschild & Co and the Client (e.g. meetings, calls, emails, documents exchanged);
- data relating to the Clients' use of Rothschild & Co's services, in particular their internal and external IDs, information about how they use Rothschild & Co's website and applications and the pages they visit, the date and duration of use of Rothschild & Co's services, web pages and applications, the users of the services, web pages and applications and the approximate geographical location (city, country) of their devices, the websites visited by the users, and the type of service provided;
- cookie information (e.g., cookies and similar technologies on websites and in emails – for more information, please refer to our Cookies Policy <https://www.rothschildandco.com/en/cookies/>);
- and other data similar to the categories mentioned.

4. What does Rothschild & Co process the Clients' data for (purpose of processing) and on what legal basis?

Rothschild & Co processes personal data in accordance with the provisions of the revFADP (as well as the EU General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and applicable regulations like DFIC Data Protection regulations) as follows:

4.1 To fulfill its contractual obligations

Data is processed in order to provide financial advisory services in the context of carrying out Rothschild & Co's contracts with Clients or to carry out pre-contractual measures that occur as part of a client request.

The purposes of data processing are primarily in compliance with the specific advisory product and can include, among others, needs assessments, advice and support.

Rothschild & Co may thus use personal data, inter alia:

- to manage its contractual relationship with the Clients (including, but not limited to: (i) to manage contract-related communications with the Clients; (ii) to provide services, including the payment of fees and/or invoicing; and to advise and assist its Clients);
- to manage its pre-contractual relationship with the Clients and, subsequently, to start a business relationship with Rothschild & Co, including all formalities relating to the identification of the Clients;

- to comply with and enforce the applicable terms of contracts; and
- to send administrative information (such as, for example, an update of Rothschild & Co's general terms and conditions or any report prepared by Rothschild & Co regarding its services).

Clients can find further details about the purposes of data processing in the relevant general terms and conditions and contract documents.

4.2 To pursue its legitimate interests

Where required, Rothschild & Co processes Client data for the purposes of the legitimate interests pursued by Rothschild & Co or a third party, including, inter alia:

- to review and optimize procedures for needs assessment for the purpose of direct client discussions;
- for marketing or market and opinion research purposes, unless a Client has objected to the use of its data;
- to establish, assert and/or defend actual or potential legal claims;
- to ensure the security of Rothschild & Co's premises and infrastructures (such as access controls);
- to ensure IT security and IT operations of Rothschild & Co;
- to prevent, detect and investigate crimes (in particular fraud);
- to improve Rothschild & Co's business, to improve the quality of its services, as well as to further develop its services and products;
- to develop its relationship with the Clients;
- to undertake data analytics to learn more about how the Clients interact with Rothschild & Co's websites, its applications and its advertising;
- to analyse and predict some of the Clients' personal preferences, interests and behaviours based on their use of Rothschild & Co's services, website, and applications (profiling); and
- for risk management purposes within the Rothschild & Co Group.

In addition, Rothschild & Co obtains personal data from publicly available sources for client acquisition purposes.

4.3 To comply with its legal and regulatory obligations

Rothschild & Co is subject to various legal and regulatory obligations and has to comply with other legal process and law enforcement requirements, which may include laws outside the country the Client is located in, including, inter alia:

- to check the Clients' or its corporate bodies' identity;

- to set up measures to prevent abuse, fraud and money laundering (e.g. to detect transactions that deviate from usual patterns);
- to comply with regulations related to the prevention of money laundering, financial crime, financing of terrorism and market abuse;
- to comply with regulations related to sanctions and embargoes;
- to comply with regulations related to financial markets;
- to fight against tax fraud and to comply with any applicable tax supervision and reporting obligations;
- to comply with any applicable transaction reporting obligation; and
- to comply with Rothschild & Co's prudential obligations (e.g. in terms of risk identification, management and control).

4.4 As a result of Client's consent

Where Rothschild & Co would need to process personal data for purposes other than those listed in sections 4.1 to Error! Reference source not found. above, it shall inform the Client, and, where necessary, request its consent.

In addition, the Client acknowledges that, as long as it has granted Rothschild & Co consent to process its personal data for certain purposes, this processing is legal on the basis of the Client's consent. Consent given can be withdrawn at any time. Withdrawal of consent does not affect the legality of data processed prior to withdrawal.

5. Who receives Client data?

Within Rothschild & Co, every unit which requires Client data to fulfill Rothschild & Co's contractual and statutory obligations will have access to it, on a need-to-know basis. Service providers and vicarious agents appointed by Rothschild & Co may also receive access to data for the purposes provided in this Privacy Statement, if such third parties maintain confidentiality. These are companies which are active, mainly, in the categories of banking services, IT services, logistics, printing services, telecommunications, collection, advice and consulting, and sales and marketing.

Rothschild & Co is obliged to uphold secrecy with respect to all client-related matters and assessments of which Rothschild & Co acquires knowledge.

Rothschild & Co may transfer information about a Client only: (i) if legal provisions require it (i.e. the provision of personal data would thus be mandatory); (ii) if a Client has given its consent; or (iii) if Rothschild & Co has been authorized to issue an account inquiry. Under these circumstances, recipients of personal data can be, for example:

- public entities and institutions (e.g. Swiss National Bank, FINMA) and other competent regulatory, prosecuting, tax or governmental authorities, courts or other tribunals in any jurisdiction upon request and to the extent permitted by law;

- credit and financial service institutions or comparable institutions (including Rothschild & Co Group companies) to which Rothschild & Co transfers the Client's personal data in order to carry out a business relationship with a Client (depending on the contract);
- service providers (including Rothschild & Co Group companies) which perform services on Rothschild & Co's behalf, such as communication infrastructure providers, IT providers, distribution platforms and courier services or providers of monitoring and alert management related to certain activities on Rothschild & Co's information systems, development and/or operation and provision of a core business platform and other software, including internal and external communication interfaces (including with the Client);
- certain types of professionals (e.g. legal advisors, accountants, auditors, insurers and tax advisors);
- other companies belonging to the Rothschild & Co Group for the purpose of risk control due to statutory or official obligations (e.g. for group-wide monitoring of compliance, money laundering and other risks);

Other recipients of data can be any units for which a Client has given Rothschild & Co its consent to transfer data or for which a Client has released Rothschild & Co from confidentiality by means of a declaration or consent.

Irrespective of the above, Rothschild & Co reserves its right to make personal data accessible to other recipients, as disclosed to the Clients from time to time or where required by applicable laws or requested by a competent authority.

Where the transfer of personal data is mandatory (e.g. with respect to Rothschild & Co's legal and/or regulatory obligations), the Client understands that, should it withdraw or refuse its consent to such transfer, Rothschild & Co may be precluded from having a business relationship with the Client and/or from rendering (all or part of) its services to the Client.

6. May data be transferred outside of Switzerland?

Rothschild & Co may transfer, communicate or store personal data to States outside Switzerland, the EU or the European Economic Area ("EEA"), where:

- it is necessary for the purpose of carrying out contractual obligations directly or indirectly related to Rothschild & Co's relationship with the Client;
- it is required by law (e.g. reporting obligations under fiscal law or reporting obligations);
- it is necessary to enable Rothschild & Co to establish, exercise or defend itself against a present or future claim, or to enable it to deal with an investigation by a public authority, in Switzerland or abroad;
- it is necessary to protect an overriding public interest; or
- Clients have granted their consent.

In the context of an international transfer, personal data may be transferred to:

- a State for which the local competent authority provides an adequate level of data protection (from a Swiss perspective).
- a State that does not offer an adequate level of data protection (from a Swiss perspective). In such a case, Rothschild & Co will either (i) obtain the Client's consent, or (ii) put in place appropriate contractual, technical and/or organizational safeguards (e.g., contract based on the standard contractual clauses "SCC" adopted by the European Commission, recognized by the Federal Data Protection and Information Commissioner "FDPIK" and adapted to Swiss data protection legislation) to ensure the protection of the Client's personal data.

The list of destination countries may be found under the following link:

https://www.rothschildandco.com/siteassets/publications/rothschildandco/wealth_management/legal/en_wm_list_of_countries_to_which_personal_data_may_be_transferred.pdf.

To obtain more details on international data transfers, the Clients may contact the Data Protection Officer, at the address provided for in section 11 below.

7. For how long will Client data be stored?

Rothschild & Co will process and store personal data of Clients for as long as it is necessary in order to fulfill its contractual and statutory obligations.

If the data is no longer required in order to fulfill contractual or statutory obligations, it is deleted, unless further processing is required – for a limited time – for the following purposes:

- fulfilling obligations to preserve records according to commercial and tax law: This includes, in particular, the Swiss Code of Obligations, the Federal Act on Value Added Tax, the Federal Act on Direct Taxation, the Federal Act on Harmonization of Direct Taxes of Cantons and Municipalities, the Federal Act on Stamp Duties and the Federal Act on Withholding Tax.

8. What data protection rights does a Client have?

Each Client has the following rights:

- the right to access its personal data: i.e. the right to obtain information with respect to the data Rothschild & Co processes (article 25 revFADP, article 15 GDPR and article 33 of DFIC DP Law);
- the right to object at any time to the processing of its personal data, on grounds relating to its particular situation (article 32 revFADP, article 21 GDPR and article 32 of DFIC DP Law);
- the right to withdraw its consent: where the Client has granted its consent to Rothschild & Co processing its personal data, the Client has the right to withdraw its consent at any time. The Client notes that the withdrawal only applies to the future. Processing that was carried out before the withdrawal is thus not affected by it;

- the right to rectify its personal data, where such data is inaccurate or incomplete (article 32 revFADP, article 16 GDPR and article 33 of DFIC DP Law);
- the right to erase its personal data: i.e. the right to have its personal data deleted to the extent permitted by law (article 32 revFADP, article 17 GDPR and article 33 of DFIC DP Law);
- the right to restrict the processing of its personal data (article 32 revFADP, article 18 GDPR and article 33 of DFIC DP Law);
- and if applicable – the right to data portability (article 28 revFADP, article 20 GDPR and article 37 of DFIC DP Law). Furthermore, if applicable to a Client, there is also a right to lodge a complaint with an appropriate data protection regulatory authority (article 77 of the GDPR).

Rothschild & Co draws the Client's attention to the fact that, even if the Client objects to the processing of its personal data, Rothschild & Co is entitled to continue the processing if it is:

- required by law;
- necessary for the performance of a contract to which the Client is a party;
- necessary for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest; or
- necessary for Rothschild & Co's overriding legitimate interests, including the establishment, exercise, or defense of legal claims. Rothschild & Co will not use for direct marketing purposes personal data of Clients who object to such processing.

9. Does a Client have to provide Rothschild & Co with data?

In the context of Rothschild & Co's business relationship with a Client, a Client must provide all personal data that is required for accepting and carrying out a business relationship and fulfilling the accompanying contractual obligations Rothschild & Co is legally obliged to collect.

In particular, anti-money laundering regulations require Rothschild & Co to identify Clients on the basis of the Client's or its corporate bodies' identification documents (e.g. passport, ID card) before establishing a business relationship and to collect and put on record e.g. name, address and other contact details, place and date of birth, nationality, and identification details for this purpose.

In order for Rothschild & Co to be able to comply with these statutory obligations, a Client must provide Rothschild & Co with the necessary information and documents in accordance with the Swiss Anti-Money Laundering Act, and to immediately disclose any changes over the course of the business relationship.

If a Client does not provide Rothschild & Co with the necessary information and documents, Rothschild & Co cannot enter into or continue the business relationship with a Client as desired.

10. Will profiling take place?

Rothschild & Co processes some of the Client data automatically, with the goal of assessing certain personal aspects (profiling). Rothschild & Co uses profiling for the following cases, for instance:

- Due to legal and regulatory requirements, Rothschild & Co is obligated to combat money laundering, terrorism financing, and offenses that pose a danger to assets. Data assessments (including on payment and securities transactions) are also carried out for this purpose. At the same time, these measures also serve to protect Clients.
- Rothschild & Co uses assessment tools in order to be able to specifically notify Clients and advise those regarding products. These allow communications and marketing to be tailored as needed – including market and opinion research. In individual cases, Rothschild & Co processes personal data of Clients in order to conduct direct marketing. A Client has the right to object to the processing of personal data for the purpose of this type of marketing at any time. This also applies to profiling, insofar as it is in direct connection with such direct marketing. If a Client objects to processing for the purpose of direct marketing, Rothschild & Co will no longer process a Client's personal data for this purpose.
